

Gaal dedicated to public service

To the editor:

Since arriving in Bloomington 25 years ago, I have paid close attention to local government. Our civic leaders usually demonstrate a history of commitment to their local political parties. They work to support other candidates, and they champion issues that align with their core values. This is Chris Gaal.

Chris understands Bloomington — its governance, economic drivers, the diversity of its population and our concerns. He developed this broad understanding through terms on city council, Bloomington Economic Development Corporation, plan commission, MCCSC Foundation and as our prosecutor. Regionally, Chris is a prominent member of the Indiana Prosecuting Attorneys Council, serving as senior member of the Delinquency, Domestic Violence, and Sex Crimes Committee.

Don't just take my word for it! Chris Gaal has been recognized for his outstanding initiatives in service of the elderly, and of both adult and child victims of sexual assault and domestic violence. Essential services like the sexual assault nurse examiner program at Bloomington Hospital and the pediatric forensic medical exam program for child abuse investigations would not be in place without Chris's advocacy and guidance.

Chris Gaal has dedicated his life to public service and our community. I see no better qualified candidate for judge.
